Sentinel is the first USB security lock developed by SuperPro Rainbow after merging with Safenet. This key can be used to self-define some modules. The Sentinel key has the ability to memorize up to four digital codes. This is the first device that can store up to four passwords and use them to unlock. Previously, this was possible only with the help of special software installed on a computer or tablet. Each password is unique and exists only for that key. Sentinel uses FIDO Secure Socket Extension (FSS) for authentication.
