The Boat Race is a side-by-side rowing race between crews from the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In a race umpired by Sir John French, Cambridge took an early lead and won by lengths in a time of 19 minutes 12 seconds. The victory took the overall record to 34-34 in Cambridge's favour. It was the first Boat Race to be broadcast on BBC radio. Background The Boat Race is a side-by-side rowing competition between the University of Oxford (sometimes referred to as the "Dark Blues") and the University of Cambridge (sometimes referred to as the "Light Blues"). The race was first held in 1829, and since 1845 has taken place on the Championship Course on the River Thames in southwest London. Cambridge went into the race as reigning champions, having defeated Oxford by lengths in the 1935 race. Oxford led overall with 31 victories to Cambridge's 26 (excluding the "dead heat" of 1877). The race was umpired by former England cricketer and rower Sir John French, who rowed for Oxford in the 1908 and 1909 races. For the first time since 1919, neither Oxford nor Cambridge was represented by the reigning Blues Boat Club president. Cambridge were coached by G. C. Smith (who had rowed for Cambridge twice in the Boat Race) and L. E. Proud (three-time Blue) while Oxford's coach was E. D. Adams (Light Blue). Cambridge's Chief Waterman was William Hutchinson, while Oxford's was F. S. Howden. The umpire for the race was John French, the younger brother of the previous year's umpire, and former captain of the Dark Blues. Crews The Oxford crew weighed an average of 11 st 13 lb (64.3 kg), per rower more than their opponents. In the Cambridge crew the weight of the bow oar was increased from, from the 1934 race and that of the stroke, E. B. Lowry, was increased from. Oxford's crew
