Genetic and pathogenic origin of progression in human pancreatic ductal adenocarcinoma. Pancreatic cancer is a dismal, extremely lethal disease, and chemotherapeutic drugs offer little benefit. The few therapies that have been developed remain plagued by toxicity and resistance. Elucidation of its genetic and pathogenic origin has revealed multiple subtypes within this disease that have distinct prognoses and treatment requirements. This review summarizes the current state of our understanding of the genetic and pathogenic origins of human pancreatic ductal adenocarcinoma, the most common and fatal subtype of the disease.

Human rights advocates and LGBT activists say they have filed a complaint with the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR), a regional human rights body of the Organization of American States (OAS), over the continued persecution and discriminatory actions of police against LGBT people in Argentina. The complainants say the attack against two LGBT activists was part of a broader crackdown by police against LGBT and women's rights activists, as well as a failure of the Argentine government to protect human rights. The complainants told the press they filed their complaints after the attack that took place on July 25th. The two activists were allegedly attacked by a police officer and a police employee during a protest in Cachi, at the western edge of Argentina. One of the activists suffered a broken nose and injuries to his face, and the other suffered an injury to his right hand. According to the press, the activists were protesting against the use of police violence. "The use of violence against LGBT people and women's rights activists is part of the strategy that the police have for dealing with the campaign for equality in the State," said Alfredo Deschamps, executive director of the Nonviolent Initiative, one of the complainants. "The police have declared a war on all those who demand more rights and dignity, ♦"
